"Gather up the Fragments that remain."

PREFACE.

The preparation of the following pages for the press has been most pleasurable to me, being in grateful accord with tastes and aims deeply cherished and increasingly absorbing. The task, however, was a novel one, and has been attended with the disadvantage of having been performed in those hours of release from exacting daily pursuits which are usually devoted by others to amusement or repose. The result is offered with much diffidence, as I do not claim any qualities requisite to such labors, other than those of earnestness and assiduity. I am painfully conscious of my deficiencies and can only expect that those who are disposed to be critical, will find much to condemn in this unpretensious tribute to the history of my native State. To such, the language employed may be objectionable, the arrangement unskillful, and the details frequently of local triviality, and perchance fully freighted with inaccuracies. For the first two faults, apologetic explanations have been offered; to the third objection, I am constrained to urge that to the historian, I feel that any detail which may serve to enhance the vividness of a local narrative, and to aid as a link connecting the past with the present, will not be idle, and surely some concession might be allowed to the proverbial reverential craving of a people resident—for the traditions proper of their own locality. To the last complaint, it can only be sorrowfully admitted, that in matters of minute historical narration or in genealogical data, entire accuracy can neither be attained nor expected—the more especially when materials have to be drawn principally from tradition, unpublished memoranda and ephemeral publications. Only those whose labors require a resort to such sources can realize the perplexities incident thereon—among which may be cited—the reconciling of variances in different accounts, the drawing of deductions from mere illusions or scantily detailed events, and the identification of individuals designated by family name only. To the truly earnest student of history all contributions to its truth or accuracy by the correction of error or the addition of facts are ever gratefully welcome. The fragments of genealogy embodied in the appended notes, are, I regret, very deficient in requisite essentials. They are offered in their present crude and unsatisfactory state, principally with the hope that they may serve as stimulating nuclei for the use of those who, from consanguinity, it might be hoped would be interested in them. The inestimable value of genealogy is every day becoming more fully recognized by the careful historian, for the precision in individuality, era and location of event, to which it enables him; nor is he less appreciative of the assistance to be derived from the contemporaneous journals and narratives of private individuals and local bodies, for they offer features to him which the dignified historian has ignored, arraying, as they do, before our mind's eye, in vivid reality, the people of a period as they were in every aim and requirement of life, enabling oftimes an instantaneous deduction of incentive or cause, which the stately pages of history from their generality might have baffled. Might it not be here pertinent to enquire if history would not be a more valuable and satisfactory guide if its pages were made to include an account (disposed according to the taste of the historian) of its actors in their daily pursuits, with their results, their dress and their social customs!

In conclusion, I desire to avail myself of this opportunity to testify my grateful appreciation of the many favors, the valuable advice and the hearty sympathy which, in the prosecution of my tastes during a series of years, that I have been the recipient of from my constant friend, Thomas H. Wynne, Esq., at whose suggestion, indeed, the present effort was undertaken, and at whose cost it is now being printed. I know of no one to whom my fellow-citizens of the Old Dominion owe more than to him for his life-long devoted efforts in the preservation of record and relic elucidating her history and archeology, nor can his claim in the cause of her material interests be deemed a slight one.

INTRODUCTION.

Surely no portion of the early history of Virginia can more attractively appeal to the thoughtful of her sons than that relating to Henrico Parish, enriched as it is with incidents the most important and deeply interesting. It comprised within its limits the second settlement made in the Colony, the town of Henricopolis, (afterwards contracted to Henrico) which was founded by Sir Thomas Dale, at the head of one hundred and fifty settlers, in the early part of the month of September, 1611. It received its name in honor of Prince Henry, the eldest son of James the First, and was built upon that peninsula on James River, which is formed by an extraordinary curve in its course resembling that of a horse-shoe—the river, after a sweep of seven miles, returning to a point within one hundred and twenty yards from that of its deviation.* The name of the bend, Dutch Gap, by the events of the late war, attained a historic notoriety: a navigable canal across its narrowest breadth, the digging of which for military advantages, was commenced by the Federal General, B. F. Butler, has recently been completed. The first rector of Henrico parish was the Rev. Alexander Whitaker, who accompanied Sir Thomas Dale to the Colony in 1611. He was a truly pious man, and his zealous efforts in the cause of religion among the Indians, promised the most fruitful results. They were unfortunately terminated by his accidental death by drowning, in 1617. Two events occurred in the year 1614, which were of the deepest import to the welfare of the Colonists: the baptism and marriage of the gentle Pocahontas. It is a matter of controversy whether they occurred at Henrico or Jamestown, but it is conceded that the officiating clergyman was Mr. Whittaker. * To the town and parish of Henrico also belong the honor of the first active movement, on a large scale, in the cause of education in the Colony, for though King James had some years before this, through the Archbishop of Canterbury, called upon the Bishops and Clergy of England to take up collections for the founding of a University in Virginia; yet it was not until the year 1619 that the Virginia Company having their attention called to the subject, caused to be circulated a subscription to defray the expenses of founding a college to be located at the town of Henrico. An appropriation of fifteen thousand acres of land, lying on both sides of the river, was made, and during this and the following year, one hundred laborers were imported to cultivate them; eighty young women were also sent over as wives for the men. The products of the land were to be devoted to the support of the College. During the years 1619–20–21, some £1,300 sterling and books towards a library, were subscribed. Preparations for carrying into effect this most enlightened measure, were being superintended by Mr. George Thorpe, (a kinsman of Sir Thomas Dale) when it was abruptly terminated by the lamentable massacre of the Colonists, by the Indians, on the 22d of March, 1622. Mr. Whittaker administered at both Henricopolis and Bermuda Hundreds. He was succeeded, as rector, by his assistant, the Rev. William Wickham, and he, in turn, by the Rev. Mr. Stockam; then we have no definite account of a minister until the year 1685, when the Rev. Jas. Blair settled in the parish; he remained its rector until 1794, when he became President of William and Mary College, and Commissary of Virginia.* He appears to have been succeeded by the Rev. George Robinson,† who was in charge in 1695. The next account we have of the parish is of date 1724, and is contained in an answer to the circular of the Bishop of London, but unfortunately the original manuscript was mutilated, by the cutting away of the name of the minister subscribed. The minister had been in the parish fourteen years. The bounds of the parish were eighteen by twenty-five miles; it contained two churches and one chapel. There were eleven hundred tithables, slaves sixteen years old, and four hundred families. The attendance at church sometimes numbered from one to two hundred. There was no public school. There were only about twenty communicants at a time when sacrament was administered.‡

The Vestry Book, the original of our text, continues more definitley the history of Henrico Parish. Commencing with the minutes for the year 1730, the record is continuous to the year 1773, inclusive. A meeting of the Vestry appears to have been held at the Court House of Henrico County, July 8th, 1771; the two additional meetings, the minutes of which are recorded, must have been held at the same place.

‡ Perry's Virginia Church Papers, p. 35.

The Vestry Book, we have good reason to conclude, was left among the records of the Court for safe keeping; the troublous revolutionary period succeeding, its place of deposit was most likely overlooked, and soon the very existence of the book forgotten. It remained unnoticed among the Court records until within a year or two past, when its character was accidentally discovered by Peyton Rhodes Carrington, Esq., of this City, who promptly took steps to have it restored to appropriate custody. It is now in the possession of the Vestry of the venerable St. John's Church, who most obligingly allowed the editor the privilege of transcribing its contents; which he has faithfully endeavored. The volume is a folio, measuring eight inches in width by twelve inches in length, with a binding twice covered with vellum, now much discolored. The record contained, comprises one hundred and ninety-one manuscript pages, which, with the exception of a few time-faded spots and margins, are still entirely legible. There are a few additional blank leaves, and palpably some are missing from that portion of the book devoted to a registry of the births and deaths in the parish. The water-mark of the paper is that of the reign of George II. There are no means of determining who was the Rector of Henrico Parish from the time of the incumbency of the Rev. George Robinson, to that of the opening of the Vestry Book, in 1730, with the Rev. James Keith as Minister. His connection with the Parish was severed March 2d, 1733. We now find that the Rev. Zachariah Brook and the Rev. David Mossom officiate at intervals until sometime in 1735. In September of that year, the Rev. Anthony Gavin, who appears to have already ministered to the Parish, accepts a call to the rector-ship—there is no record of the surrender of his charge ;* but on July 18th, 1736, the Rev. Wm. Stith having produced letters of recommendation from Geo. Gooch and Commissary Blair, and having that day administered divine service to the satisfaction of the Vestry, was thereupon elected rector. He resigned December 3d, 1751, to take effect October 1st, 1752, having been elected President of William and Mary College, and being called at the same time to the rectorship of St. Anne's Church, his incumbency of these positions commencing with the latter date. The Rev. Roscow Cole is next called, but appears not to have accepted. The Rev. Joseph Bewsher or Berewsher†—(it being so variously spelled in the original) was unanimously elected June 22, 1752, to succeed Mr. Stith ; but he appears to have resigned before entering upon charge, for we find the Rev. Miles Selden to have been elected August 25th, 1752. He continued in charge the remainder of the period covered by the old Vestry Book, and from published lists of Parish Rectors, was still reported as the Rector of Henrico Parish in 1776. It is highly probable that the divine service was but seldom performed in the churches of Henrico Parish, if they were not closed during the years comprising the period of the Revolutionary War and immediately following it, since the church establishment then fell into entire neglect.

The further history of the parish may now be limited to its most interesting memorial, the venerable St. John's Church, which if not admitted to be the cradle of liberty in Virginia, is surely entitled to the claim of having been its fostering temple—for within its hallowed walls, met on the 20th of March, 1775, the second patriot convention of Virginia, and and here it was that Patrick Henry with an eloquence born of unfettered nature's own sublime simplicity, sounded the tocsin of freedom, in that famed soul-stirring effort, concluding with the immortal words "Give me liberty, or give me death"* Here, again, it met on the 17th of July following; and here, also, in 1788, met that sage body of statesmen who ratified the Federal Constitution. The church situated in the eastern part of the city, upon Richmond Hill (so named from its resemblance to Richmond Hill on the Thames,) the most beautiful of all from which Richmond derives its designation of the "City of the Seven Hills," is a plain wooden structure of irregular form, approaching that of the letter T, with a sharply ridged roof; it is surmounted on the north side by a belfry and spire containing a bell the most melodious in sound of any in the city, and is embosomed in a beautiful grove of varied growth. † The yard, occupying an entire square, is elevated several feet above the streets, and is well enclosed with a brick wall of ample heighth; it is ridged with the little hillocks, and

* The Rev. Anthony Gavin addressed a letter to the Bishop of London, from St. James' Parish, Goochland, August 5th, 1738.—Perry's Va. Papers, p. 360.

* The chancel was formerly in the southeast corner of the original church building, and the orator is said to have occupied a position near it whilst delivering his memorable speech. The original pulpit, which is said to have been brought from England, is still in use. The sounding board overhead was inlaid in the form of a star, with woods of different colors, but is at present painted white.

† The original Church was built with the ends almost duly north and south, and it occupies nearly that position with regard to the corners of the church-yard, being situated a little within the limits of the lower half of its area. There was a door with two small windows above lighting the gallery in the western end, a large window and a smaller one above in the eastern end, and probably six windows on either side; with the addition on the south, of a door, these six circular top windows remain—the lights or window panes of which measure only six by eight inches.

thickly studded with the mouldering and moss-grown monuments of the dead, for more than a century past.*

Its commanding location affords a view of the surrounding country of rare and varied loveliness. Taking our stand beneath the western eaves of the old church, and slowly turning, we have passing our vision a panorama which at once entrances the senses. In the distance, in their wild grandeur of rocks, (a rugged rupture seemingly of nature's upheaving bosom) green islets and foaming currents, the famed falls of the James (the ancient Powhatan) give forth a sullen and continuous roar, in their angry course; Hollywood Cemetery, sublimely picturesque in its noble groves, gleaming monuments, hills and sequestered vales, threaded by silvery streamlets; the peacefully gliding canal, with its line of boats; the celebrated Tredegar Iron Works, with their glowing furnaces; and flame-belching chimnies, the desolated walls of the State Armory—a memory of that culmination of calamity, the awful visitation of the 3d of April, 1865; the imposing Gallego and Haxall Flouring Mills; our fair city with its towers, steeples and prominent central figure of the capitol, with its surrounding beauty of meandering walk, grass plot and green shades—are all gathered in a single coup d'oeil. Now changing our position to the south of the Church, the noble James spreads out into nearly a mile's breadth beneath us,

* The Editor having carefully transcribed all of the epitaphs (among which are those of many of Virginia's revered sons) contained in the old church-yard, and possessing besides a copy of the Parish Registry of births, deaths and marriages, from the time of the incumbency of the Rev. Dr. John Buchanan, he hopes at some future time to be able to present them also in durable form, as a continuation of the present volume. Tradition affirms that the first baptism in the Old Church, was that of Samuel Ege, who, if now living, would be one hundred and fifty years of age.

with its spanning bridges; the town of Manchester, with its cotton, woollen and flouring mills, whilst lower down, along its northern margin, lie the Richmond Docks, studded with a little forest of masts and rigging; below, on the southern side, are the noted "Falls Plantations," whilst on either side lie broad and fertile flats, flanked by dense forests.

The building of the Church, now known as St. John's, was determined on by the Vestry of Henrico Parish, held December 20th, 1739, and was directed to be located upon the lands of Wm. Byrd. The dimensions were to be twenty-five in breadth, by sixty feet in length, with a pitch of fourteen feet. Richard Randolph contracted to build it at a cost of £317. 10 shillings current money, agreeing to complete it by the 10th of June, 1741. On the 13th day of October, 1740, a letter of Wm. Byrd, dated the 12th, professing to give two lots in the town of Richmond * as a site for the Church, it was

* These were lots 97 and 98, (each containing one-fourth of a square) in the original plan of Richmond, as laid off for Wm. Byrd by Major Wm. Mayo, in April, 1737. The Church-yard was extended to its present limits in the year 1799, by the purchase on the part of the City of Richmond, of lot 111, from Dr. John Adams, and of lot 112 from Col. Richard Adams, Jr., executor of Thomas B. Adams. The City Council then, by an arrangement (the only previous action was of date August 13th, 1782, appointing a committee to superintend the registering of births, deaths and marriages in the town,) with the Church Vestry, caused the entire ground to be enclosed. The dead of every denomination were thenceforth allowed to be interred within their limits, until the establishment of other cemeteries by the city—(that on Shockoe Hill was authorized June 19th, 1815;) the keeping of the enclosure in repair, to be at the expense of the corporate authorities of the city, in whom were vested the power to establish regulations for the same. By ordinance, now in force, a yearly appropriation is made towards repairs, and the expenditure of the same and the control of the church-yard is vested in a committee of three, appointed by the council. The present committee consists of Messrs. Thomas H. Wynne, President of the Council, C. B. Lipscombe and R. A. Brock. The sexton of the old church-yard was, for many years, at the beginning of the present century, a woman, a Mrs. Charity Bowers, who was sometimes assisted by her sons. Her successor was Joseph Myer. The duties have been performed for some years past successively by an Italian named Griffini (commonly called Jack) and his son Antonio.

It is a source of mortification and regret, that the old church-yard has not agreed definitely to accept his offer, and to erect the church upon the hill called Indian Town, at Richmond, agreeably to the former contract with Richard Randolph. The designation of the church, for a long while, appears to have been simply the "upper church," "Church at Richmond," "Henrico Church," or the "Church on Richmond Hill." The title, St. John's, must have been decided upon by the Vestry, at a meeting held April 20th, 1829—for on the 25th instant following, the name is first so recorded.* An addition to the church upon the north side, twenty-five feet in width by forty feet in length, with a gallery on both sides and in one end, was decided upon by the Vestry, at a meeting held December 8th, 1772.† For a period succeeding the Revolutionary War, the Episcopal Church in Virginia appears to have been in a dormant condition, and the Old Church at Richmond, it is presumed, remained quite as much neglected, as her sisterhood scattered over the State.

A meeting was held March 28th, 1785, at the Court House in Richmond, agreeably to a recent Act of the Virginia Assembly, granting the Episcopal Church certain privileges of tenure and property, as enjoyed by other religious sects, which by previous enactment had been denied to reorganize the Church on Richmond Hill, and the following Vestrymen were elected:

always received from those in charge that care and attention to which its appealing past so completely entitles it—for in one of its corners lie heaped a confused mass of tombstones, entire and fragmentary, (among them several of prominent and cherished citizens) which we are informed, having from time to time fallen at their proper stations, instead of being promptly reset, were removed to their present ignoble place of deposit. Their proper positions were speedily forgotten, and now the graves of the honorable dead are unmarked and their indentification rendered an impossibility. How could this have been allowed to occur?

He was a pious and good man, simple in his tastes and economical in his habits. Inheriting a competency from his brother James, § who had been a successful merchant of Richmond, he is reported to have claimed but little as salary from his parishoners. By resolution of the Vestry of April 27th, 1790, Ministers of other denominations were permitted to preach in the Churches of the Parish, and on the 18th day of April, 1812, special permission was given the Rev. John D. Blair, a Presbyterian, to fill the pulpit of the Church on Richmond Hill every alternate Sunday. between the Reverend Messrs. Buchanan and Blair, and of the generosity of the former to his more needy brother.*

On the 15th of February, 1791, the Treasurer of the Parish, Jacqueline Ambler, reports to the Vestry the sum of thirty-four pounds, raised by a concert and the sale of an organ.

On the 25th of April following, a committee appointed to enquire into the property of the parish, réport that "The Glebe, of Henrico Parish, consists of 196 acres of land by an old patent, the houses out of repair, it rents for £40 per annum, and the supposed present value £1000. Personal property, one silver cup and salver." In 1814 the Richmond Church was repaired, the roof being shingled and much of the frame-work renewed, and the Monumental Church having been completed, the services of a minister to assist the Rev. Dr. Buchanan became necessary. On the 23d of July, 1814, an invitation was extended to the Rev. David Moore, of New York, the son of Bishop Richard Channing Moore, at a salary of $1000 per annum, with the promise that he should succeed to the permanent rectorship of the Parish, in the contingency of the death of the Rev. Dr. Buchanan. It would appear that the call was declined by Mr. Moore, for the Rev. Wm. H. Hart, of New York, producing testimonials to the Vestry May 1st, 1815, he was thereupon chosen assistant minister of the Parish. On the 17th of May, 1816, Mr. Hart was authorized to treat for the purchase of an organ for the church, at a cost of $1100. Ben'j Watkins Leigh and Dr. John Adams were appointed lay deputies to the State Episcopal Convention, in 1817. The following in relation to the church-grounds appears in the minutes of the Vestry, for April 28th, 1820: "Whereas sundry resolutions and a petition have heretofore been presented to the Honorable, the Common Hall of this city, by the Rector, Wardens and Vestry of the Old Church on Richmond Hill, in relation to the burying-ground surrounding said church, and such resolutions and petitions having never yet been acted on effectually; and whereas said burying-ground is now and has been for years past completely filled with remains, insomuch that a grave cannot be prepared without exhumating the bones of those that have been previously deposited, thereby subjecting the officers of said church to a state of constant and painful embarrasment, and almost daily outraging the feelings of our citizens—Therefore,

"Resolved by the Rector, Wardens and Vestry of said church, on Richmond Hill, that we do most solemnly and decidedly protest against the further admission of bodies into said burying-ground, and that we will use our utmost endeavor with the Common Hall of this City, to prevent the continuance of a proceeding so extremely indecorous and so repugnant to all the feelings of humanity."

A gate * was erected in June, 1820, by private subscription, in the north-west wall of the church-yard. At a called meeting of the Vestry, held November 8th, 1820, it was

"Resolved, That no old graves shall be disturbed for the purpose of interring new remains, except such as may have

* The only entrances to the church-yard in 1800, and most probably, for a long while afterwards, were on the south-side, where there were two. It is now, and has always been impracticable for vehicles to enter the church-yard—bodies being carried in on biers. At the beginning of this century, the only approach to the church was by the steep ascent of the old road-way of 25th street, leading by the church. "Resolved, That a committee be appointed for the purpose of obtaining a burying-ground, and digesting a plan thereof; and handing around a subscription to the citizens generally, for the purpose of defraying the necessary expenses incurred thereby.

"Resolved, That the secretary be requested to cause the foregoing resolution concerning the grave-yard to be published in the Times and Compiler, twice a week for four weeks."

Owing to the low financial condition of the church, the project of a new burying-ground was abandoned.

On the 1st of July, 1822, the Vestry appointed a committee to consider and report upon a proposition made by a Mr. Day, of Maryland, to build a new church on the site of the old one on Richmond Hill. This scheme, so entirely repugnant to a proper feeling of reverence and to correct taste, resulted, as it entirely merited, fruitlessly.

The good and self-sacrificing Dr. Buchanan, who had been for sometime in such declining health that the principal duties of the rector had devolved upon his assistant, to the deep grief of his parishoners, dying on the 19th of December, 1822, on the 27th instant following, the Rev. Wm. H. Hart was elected his successor.

On the 30th of March, 1824, Mr. Mark L. Chevers, who had for a series of years most faithfully discharged the duties of clerk of the Church Vestry, having received holy orders, tendered his resignation, which was received. Thereafter, the duties of clerk, secretary or register of the Vestry, appear to have been performed by one of their number.

In the minutes of a called meeting of the Vestry of Henrico Parish, held May 1st, 1826, the following, in reference to the Glebe lands, appears:* "The Rev. Rector informed the Vestry that a short time subsequent to the death of our late lamented Pastor, the Rev. John Buchanan, the overseers of the poor of Henrico County laid claim to the land owned and occupied by the church as a Glebe, and advertised it for sale; that thereupon he enjoined the proceedings and filed a bill in chancery to obtain ownership, whereupon the Chancellor (the Hon. Henry St. George Tucker) in the January term of his court, 1826, decided in favor of this church, and against all claims of the overseers of the poor aforesaid."

"Resolved, That the Rev. Wm. H. Hart, Rector; John A. Lancaster and John Dove, Wardens of this church, be and they are hereby authorized and empowered to sell one right and interest in the Glebe lands, now owned and occupied by this Parish, adjoining the Varina estate, to Mr. Pleasant Aiken, of Petersburg, in such manner as to them may appear to the best interest of the Parish."

Provision was also made for the investment of the proceeds of such sale.

At an early period, two hundred acres of land were laid off from the College or Company lands, near Henricopolis or Dale's settlement, for a Glebe, court-house, prison, &c.—one hundred and ninety-six being for the former. It was the residence Rev. Mr. Selden, but is not known to have been occ by any succeeding rector. Sometime during the decad le last century, Col. Richard Adams, Senior, donated to hurch on Richmond Hill, a commodious brick building, n distant from it, to be used as a rectory. It has been the residence of the successive ministers since. *

An appeal from the decision of the Chancellor was taken by the overseers of the poor, and Mr. Aiken declined closing his purchase of the lands in question, until the decision of the Court of Appeals. On March 26th, 1828, at a meeting of the Vestry, it was,

"Resolved, That the Rev. Rector be requested to lease the Glebe lands, adjoining Varina estate and belonging to the Parish, to such person and upon such terms, as he may think will best secure their preservation."

No further reference to the matter appears in the minutes of the Vestry, who afterwards preferred to surrender their apparently just claims, (which differing from those of other Parishes in the State, which had been acquired chiefly by purchase with Parish funds, was derived direct by virtue of early gift from the London company.) rather than enter into what was a repugnant, and which might prove, a protracted controversy.

The Rev Wm. H. Hart resigning on the 13th July, 1828, the Rev. Wm. F. Lee was elected Rector of the Parish.

In the year 1829, a proposition was made to remove the Old Church below the hill, or to build or purchase a new one.* Divisions occurred in the congregation, which resulted in the resignation of Mr. Lee and several of the Vestrymen, on the 31st December, 1829, and the purchase of the Presbyterian church, situated on the south-side of Grace, between 17th and 18th streets, which was built under the auspices of the Rev. John H. Rice, D. D., and which from the design of its cupola, was quaintly known as the "Pine Apple Church." It received, under its new control, the name of Christ Church. Mr. Lee remained its minister until his death. The church was demolished several years since. Mr. Lee is supposed to have continued to minister to the congregration of St. John's until the installation of the Rev. Edward W. Peet, who was elected to the rectorship February 24th, 1830.

At a meeting of the Vestry, held August 2d, 1831, "The Rector read to the Vestry a communication from certain persons, asking the sanction of the Vestry to the establishment of a new Episcopal church within the Parish of Henrico, to be located on a convenient situation on Shockoe hill. Whereupon,

"Resolved, Unanimously, that the Rector and Vestry of Henrico Parish, regarding with pleasure the prospect of promoting the welfare of the Episcopal church within the Parish, do cheerfully assent to the erection of the proposed church on Shockoe hill: Provided, the said church be located on some spot west of the Capitol."

This was the preliminary step which led to the erection of

* The Editor has been informed that the building of a new church was commenced at the corner of 23d and Broad streets—that it progressed so far as the first story of masonry, when the project was abandoned.

St. Paul's Church. On the 25th of July, 1833, the Rev. Mr. Poet resigning, the Rev. Robt. B. Croes was elected Rector of St. John's church. The church was repaired and enlarged during the year 1830, and a brick building, for Sunday school purposes, erected in the southern portion of the church-yard. *

Unhappy differences occurring between Mr. Croes and his congregation, led to the severance of his connection with the church on the 14th of January, 1836. The Rev. Wm. H. Hart was now elected Rector January 22d, 1836, and he appears to have entered on his duties sometime prior to the 16th of May, ensuing. He resigned the pastorate on the 28th of

* The present dimensions of the original portion of the church building correspond very nearly to those specified in the text, measuring twenty-five feet, four inches in breadth, by sixty feet, six inches in length. There is reason to believe that a majority of the weather-boarding has occupied its present place since the period of the first addition to the church, and perchance earlier, as with the exception of such portions as were rendered necessary to be renewed because of a change made by the removal of the entrance to the church on the south-side, to the eastern end, (which was done within a few years past,) where it now occupies the place of a former window, and repairs near the foundation because of decay. It is of the best yellow pine and is uniformly nearly an inch in thickness, the lower edge being beaded. The portions restored are much thinner and are unbeaded. The whole is nearly two inches wider than that covering the sides of the addition, or wing of the church, which was, originally ordered to be twenty-five by forty feet, through this original addition there ran only one aisle, but there are now two, the wing having been enlarged as per the text above, now measures thirty-eight feet in breadth, by forty-five and a half feet in length. The belfry, at this period, was an open one, exposing the bell. Some repairs were made to the church and steeple in 1857, and in 1866 the present much handsomer spire took the place of the old one. The gallery (there formerly stood a small organ) directly for the original church, still remains in the western end, and the entrance beneath it is yet used. The remaining entrances, two in number, corresponding to the aisles, are in the northern end of the church. There is a door also in the base of the steeple, giving access to the bell. There, too, is a gallery within which is placed the church organ. There are now three windows on each side of the wing of the church, with lights measuring six by ten inches. The pulpit now occupies a central position in the southern side of the church. The cornice to the roof of the entire church buildings was probably added in 1830. There is a cellar beneath the old church building, in which burials of prominent individuals were made—the remains of Dr. Buchanan are said to rest there.

September, 1842, and on the 21st October following, the Rev. Wm. H. Wilmer was elected to succeed him. Mr. Wilmer declining, the Rev. J. H. Morrison was the choice of the Vestry at a meeting held January 26th, 1843. He resigned his charge on the 15th of May, 1848. The Rev. Henry S. Kepler accepted a call to the church May 1st, 1849. In the year 1852, a new wall on the eastern line of the church-yard being rendered necessary by the grading of twenty-fifth street, it was erected by appropriation of the City Council.*

The Rev. H. S. Kepler resigning the pastorate of the church June 28th, 1859, the Rev. Jno. Tevis Points accepted a call to the same on the 24th of October following. The church prospered greatly under his ministration, and by his pious zeal, self-sacrificing spirit, and warm solicitude for the welfare of his congregation, he greatly endeared himself to them. His useful labors, to the great grief of his flock, were most unfortunately terminated by his death, which occurred suddenly on the 10th of June, 1860. A handsome monument of white marble, of obelisk form, marks his remains in the old church-yard. The Rev. Wm. C. Butler accepted the charge of the church September 17th, 1860, and resigned the same November 27th, 1861. The Rev. Robert Nelson appears to have principally ministered to the Church, during the periods succeeding the resignation of the Rev. Messrs. Points and Butler and the installation of their successors. The Rev. William Norwood, D. D., was called to the rectorship March 18th, 1862. He resigned the same August 17th, 1868, and the

* The appearance of the wall at present indicates at least these several times of building or repair. Only some portions of the wall, in the southern and the lower corner of the eastern line, being palpably the remains of the one originally erected.

Rev Henry Wall, D. D., the present minister, succeeded him on the 10th of October, following. The communicants connected with the Old Church have numbered for a series of years past about one hunered, being sometimes a little less and frequently more—the constant removal of residents of Richmond Hill, to the western end of the city, prevents a more gratifying increase. The congregations, however, are often much larger, including transient visitors to the city, and residents of the other hills.

"October 12, 1740.

"Sir :

"I ſhould, with great pleaſure, oblige the Veſtry, and particularly yourſelf, in granting them an Acre to build their Church upon, but there are ſo many roads already through that Land, that the Damage to me would be too great to have another of a mile long cut thro' it. I ſhould be very glad if you would pleaſe to think Richmond a proper place, and conſidering the great number of people that live below it, and would pay their Devotions there, that would not care to go ſo much higher, I can't but think it would be agreeable to moſt of the people, and if they will agree to have it there, I will give them two of the beſt lots, that are not taken up, and beſides give them any Pine Timber they can find on that Side Shockhoe Creek, and Wood for burning of Bricks into the bargain. I hope the Gent. of the Veſtry will believe me a Friend to the Church when I make them the Offer, and that I am both theirs,

NOTES.

NOTE 1. Curls Church.—Though the orthography Curls appears to have quite generally obtained at the period of the text, and is, we are led to conclude, the only usage at the present time, it is obviously incorrect; the derivation being undoubtedly from the Virginia family name of Curle, to members of which grants of land, extending over a period of one hundred years, may be found recorded in the books of the State Land Registry Office. A prominent representative of the family was the patriot Wilson Roscow Curle, of the Revolutionary era.

The church was situated on the north side of James river, distant some eight or nine miles below the city of Richmond. Bishop Meade terms it "the Four Mile Creek, or Curls Church," and erroneously, [as is patent from the text,] gives the time of its erection as 1748. He bases his conclusion upon the following extract from a letter bearing date that year, from Richard Randolph of Curls, to his son Richard: "Pray assist Wilkinson all you can in getting the church finished, and get the shells that will be wanted carted before the roads get bad. The joiner can inform you what shells I have at the Falls; if more are wanted you must get them."*

* Old Churches and Families of Va, vol. 1, p. 138.

The Randolphs frequently undertook building. It is said that William Randolph, of Turkey Island, the first of the name in the Colony of Virginia, laid the foundation of the wealth and importance of his family, from the profits acquired in "building barns."† One account states that he landed in the Colony of Virginia with a "broad-axe upon his shoulder."‡ Col. Richard Randolph contracted, in 1739, to build the church at Richmond, agreeing to complete it by the 10th of June, 1741. It is not likely that it was so late as 1748 in being finished At a meeting of the parish vestry, held October the 2d, 1742, a meeting of the Vestry was agreed upon, to be held at Curls Church in November following, to treat with undertakers for building a Chapel at Deep Run, and an appropriation was made towards the same of 10,000 lbs. of tobacco. This was, in all probability, the Church mentioned in the letter above quoted from. In May, 1826, Dr. John Adams presented to the Vestry of St. John's Church, Richmond, the baptismal font which had been used at Curls Church.§ It is of white marble, and is in perfect preservation. Curls Church was demolished within the past twenty years.

NOTE 2. Col. Richard Randolph of Curls, the son of Wm. Randolph of Turkey Island, was the grandfather of that meteoric, though most erratic genius, John Randolph of Roanoke. He married Jane, the daughter of John Bolling of Cobbs, who was the great-grandson of Pocahontas, his mother being Jane, the daughter of Thomas Rolph, or Rolfe, hence the royal aboriginal descent so much vaunted by these families. Richard Randolph was a member of the House of Burgesses from Henrico, in 1740, and succeeded his brother William as Treasurer of the Colony. He died in England, December 17th, 1748, in the 58th year of his age. His widow died March 4th, 1766, aged 62 years.

NOTE 3. Thomas Jefferson.—The ancestors of the Jefferson family in Virginia are said to have emigrated from near Mount Snowden, in Wales. They were among the first settlers of the Colony. The name, Jefferson, appears as the representative from Fleur de Hundred, in the Colonial Assembly, which, by order of Governor Yeardly, was convened in the choir of the Church at Jamestown, on the 30th of July, 1619. This was the first legislative body of Europeans, [so far as our historical records exhibit,] that ever assembled in the New World. The first Jefferson of whom any definite accounts are preserved, was Thomas Jefferson, who resided at Osborne's, on James River, in the now county of Chesterfield, which was formed from Henrico in 1748. He occupied a respectable social station, and was possessed of a competency. His children were three in number—sons: Thomas, of the text, [who died in the year 1731, his brother Peter being his executor,] Field and Peter, the father of President Jefferson, who was born February, 1708, and married, in 1738, Jane, the daughter of Isham Randolph, of Dungeress, in Goochland county. Peter Jefferson, though he enjoyed but few advantages of early education, was a man of vigorous intellect. Having adopted the profession of a surveyor, by continuous application he had made himself so proficient in his calling, that he was chosen, in connection with Joshua Fry, Professor of Mathematics in William and Mary College, to continue the boundary line between Virginia and North Carolina, and afterwards assisted Mr Fry in preparing a map of the Colony of Virginia. Peter Jefferson was one of the first settlers, [about the year 1737,] of that portion of the county of Goochland which now forms that of Albemarle—the latter being formed in 1744. Goochland itself was carved from Henrico, in 1727. Peter Jefferson was a man of extraordinary physical strength; he could "head up," that is raise from their sides to an upright position, at once, two hogsheads of tobacco weighing near a thousand pounds each. He died in 1757, leaving a widow, [who survived until 1776,] with six daughters and two sons, of whom Thomas, then fourteen years of age, was the elder.

Note 4 p. 4. Parish Levies.—By enactment, the sheriffs of the county, or an appointment of one of their number by respective parish vestries, was required to collect the public and parish levies, giving bond and security for the faithful performance of his duties. The assessments were made for loose tobacco, and for every hundred pounds paid in hogshead, an allowance of eight per cent. was made for the hogshead or "cask." The collector was empowered to distrain for failure or delay in payment. Each parish was required to support its own paupers, and the inhabitants of one parish were forbidden, under a penalty, to entertain, hire or employ any tithable person from another parish, unless he or she could produce a receipt from the collector of the parish from whence removing, for the taxes for the preceding year. All vagrants were adjudged "rogues and vagabonds," and were bound out for one year, if a hirer could be found. But if of such evil repute that no one would receive them, the County Court was empowered to order them "thirty-nine lashes on the bare back, well laid on, at the whipping-post, and then discharged." They were liable, however, to re-arrest and repeated punishment. Vagrants and paupers were authorized to be returned to the parishes of which they had last been resident. The Church Wardens were empowered to bind out, to the age of maturity, the children of such persons as were deemed incapable of supporting or bringing them up in "honest courses."

Hening's Statutes, vol. III, p. 264; vol. VI, pp. 29, 32.

NOTE 5. Joseph Mayo emigrated from the Island of Barbadoes, to Virginia, about the year 1727.* He was a merchant, and from the text, appears to have also followed surveying. His residence was Powhatan, the location of which is well authenticated as a residence of the aboriginal potentate of this name.† It is about a half a mile below Richmond, and lies "to the south of the road which runs parallel with the river, and on a verge of the second bank, or upper level of alluvium, some forty feet above the lower. The ground falls abruptly on the front or river side, and more gradually on the other quarters. On the east, the deep channel of a brook separates it from the most commanding point of the upland." Immediately on the selection of Jamestown for the seat of the Colony, "Newport, Smith and twentie others were sent to discover the head of the river. By divers small habitations they passed, in six days they arrived at a town called Powhatan, consisting of some twelve houses, pleasantly seated on a hill; before it three fertile isles; about it many of their corne-fields; the place is very pleasant, and strong by nature—of this place the prince is called Powhatan, and the people Powhatans—to this place the river is navigable: but higher, within a myle, by reason of the Rockes and Isles, there is not passage for a small Boat; this they call the Falles."‡ "A granite boulder, about a ton in weight, is pointed out as 'Powhatan's Tombstone,'" but there is no evidence justifying the designation. It bears many traces of rude carving. A row of symmetrical holes, an inch or more deep, runs along the top. On the sloping side, are graven marks of the shape of a child's and an adult's foot, a horse-shoe, and others less distinguishable. These are obviously of far greater age than other cuttings on the same surface, which are dated 1741, and which give, in two or three places, the initial M., of the family in possession: Mayo."§ In a narrative of "Capt. Newport's discoveries, Virginia," May 21st, 1607, Powhatan is thus described: "We came to the second ilet described in the ryver; over against on Popham syde, is the habitatyon of the greate Kyng Pawatah, [one of the early modes of spelling Powhatan,] which I call Pawatah's Tower. It is scituat upon a highe hill by the water syde; a playne between it and the water, twelve score over, whereon he sowes his wheate, beane, peaze, tobacco, pompions, gowrds, hempe, flaxe, &c.; and were any art used to the naturall state of this place, it would be a goodly habitatyon."‖ The brother of Joseph Mayo, Major William Mayo, is supposed to have settled in the Colony about the same time. He accompanied, as one of the surveyors, in the years 1728-9, the commission which ran the dividing line between Virginia and North Carolina, so racily chronicled in the Westover Mss. He also, in 1737, laid off for Col. William Byrd, [the second of the name,] the town of Richmond. The brothers were the ancestors of the present very respectable family of Mayo in Virginia. Col. Wm. Mayo, Jr., of Powhatan, served in the State line during the revolution, and was a member of the House of Delegates in 1780.

The late Hon. Joseph Mayo, for a long series of years Mayor of Richmond, a worthy representative of this family, compiled, we have been informed, a geneology which connected with the Mayos of England. It is to be hoped that it will be made public; the editor craves the privilege of copying.

NOTE. 6. Processioning.—By Statute, every fourth year, between the last day of September and the last day of March following, the bounds of every person's land were required to be processioned, or "gone round," and the land-marks renewed. Such marks being made by chopping the trees. The parishes were divided into precincts, and free holders, [at least two to every precinct,] appointed to perform such duty.

‖ Archæologia American, Trans. and Coll. Am. Ant. Soc., vol. IV, p. 44.

They were required to make a return, in writing, to the parish vestry of the result of their action. It was "Provided always, That the processioning and settling the bounds of any lands belonging to any person being within the age of one and twenty years, feme covert, non compos mentis, imprisoned or out of the Colony, shall not be conclusive to such person untill after the expiration of six years from and after the said severall capacitys shall be removed and determined."

Hening's Statutes, vol. III, pp. 327-8.

NOTE 7. Field Jefferson, the brother of Thomas and Peter Jefferson, who died young and unmarried.

NOTE 8. William Randolph was the second of the name, of Turkey Island, where he is buried. He married Eliza Beverley, of Gloucester county. Had issue: Beverly, of Turkey Island; Peter, of Chatsworth, and William, of Wilton. The following is the inscription upon his monument:

Here lieth the Honourable
William Randolph, Esquire, Eldest Son of Colo. William Randolph, of this place, and of Mary, his wife,
who was of the antient and eminent family of the Ishams, of Northamptonshire.
Having been introduced early into Business,
and passed thro' many of the inferior offices of Government,
with great reputation & eminent capacity,
He was at last,
By his Majesty's happy choice,
and the universal approbation of his country,
advanced to the Council.
His experience in Men & Business,
The native gravity & dignity of his Person & Behaviour,
his attachments to the Interests of his Country,

knowledge of the laws in general, and of the laws and Constitution of this Colony in particular,
his Integrity above all calumny or suspicion,
the acuteness of his parts,
and the extensiveness of his genius,
Together with that solidity of Sense and judgment which were predominant in all he said or did, Rendered him not only equal,
but an ornament to the high office he bore,
and made him universally lament'd
as a most able & impartial Judge, and an upright magistrate
in all other respects
Neither was he less conspicuous for a certain majestic plainness of Sense and Honour, which carried him through all parts of private life with equal dignity and reputation, and deservedly obtained him the charatcer of a just and good man in all the several duties & relations of Life.

Natus } Nov., 1681.

The following in relation to the origin of the disignation, Turkey Island, we hope may not be thought uninteresting. It is extracted from a quaint tract: "A RELATYON OF THE DISCOVERY OF OUR RIVER (JAMES) FROM JAMES FORKE INTO THE MAINE; MADE BY CAPT. CHISTOPHER NEWPORT, AND SINCERELY WRITTEN AND OBSERVED BY A GENTLEMAN OF THE COLONY." (State paper office America and the West Indies.) The author of which has recently been determined, upon proofs adduced by Prof. William Green, L.L. D., Richmond, Va., to have been Capt. Gabriel Archer. On Thursday, May 21st, 1607, (Campbell, Hist. of Va., gives the date as June 4th,) Capt. Christopher Newport "having fitted our shallop with provision"—"tooke five gentlemen, four maryners, and fourteen saylors; (the names are all given, Smith mentions only himself, Newport and twentie others.) with whom he proceeded, with a perfect resolutyon not to returne; but either to find the head of this ryver, the laake mentyoned by others heretofore, the sea againe, the mountaynes Apalatsi, (Appalachian, modern,) or some issue." Having narrated a voyage of thirteen miles, the account proceeds as follows: "May 22. Friday Omitting no tyme, we passed up some sixteen myle further." [By recent measurement, the distance from City Point, near which is Turkey Island, to Newport News, (properly and originally Newport Nuce,) has been ascertained to be thirty miles, and to Jamestown, forty miles.] where wee found an ilet, on which were many turkeys, and greate store of young byrdes like black birdes; whereof we took dyvers, which we brake our fast withall," "the ryver skants of his breadth two mile before we come to the ilet mentyoned, (which I call Turkey Ile.")

Archeologia Americana—Trans. Am. Ant. Soc. Vol. IV. pp. 41-2.

NOTE. 9. John Bolling, of Cobbs, the son of Robert Bolling, (son of John and Mary Bolling, of Bolling Hall, who lived in the parish of All-halloway, or Allhallows, Barkin Parish, Town street, London, the first of the name who settled in Va.," born Dec. 26th, 1646, arrived in Va. Oct. 2d, 1660,) and Jane Rolfe, the grand-daughter of Pocahontas, was born Jan. 27th, 1676, and died April 10th, 1729. He devoted himself to commerce and amassed a large fortune.* His daughter Jane, married the first Richard Randolph of Curles.

Mr John Bolling, Surveyor, is mentioned in 1704.†

NOTE 10. The Rev James Keith.—The Rev. Mr. Keith removed to Maryland in 1735‡—doubtless him of the text. The name is a prominent one now, not only in that State, but also in Pennsylvania and Virginia.

NOTE 11. The Rev. David Mossom was born in London, Mch. 25th, 1690, and died Jan. 4th, 1767. He was the Rector of St. Peter's Church, New Kent Co., Va., for a period of forty years preceding his death. A beautiful marble tablet in the wall, on the right hand side of the pulpit, did record his virtues. "He officiated at the nuptials of General Washington, at the White House, a few miles from St. Peter's Church."‖ This venerable place of worship was the victim of the vandalism of the Federal troops during the late war, its associations with the memory of the Father of his Country, finding no responsive chord in the breasts of those zealous patriots, to stay their vengeful hands. "The Church itself was broken and battered, and rendered wholly unfit for use. The old massive stone font, in which the children of two centuries had been baptized, was broken and scattered in fragments over the floor. The chancel was torn down, the pulpit and desk broken and defaced, and not a sash was left in the windows."§ The monument to Mr. Mosson was also destroyed—nought but fragments remaining. The parishoners lately appealed to the public for contributions to aid them to so far repair the old church, that divine service might be resumed within its hallowed halls.

NOTE 12. Darby Enroughty.—The locality, Darbytown, situate a few miles below Richmond, owes its designation to its having been at one time almost exclusively peopled by those bearing the name Darby or Enroughty. It being a remarkable fact that the two names, in common parlance among them, are regarded as synonymous and interchangeable. The first, Darby, obtaining prevalence because of its brevity and easier pronunciation. (It is claimed, and with apparent reason, that the name was originally Derby, which among the lower English classes is even now pronounced, as by those simple people.) Those of them, however, who are able to write their names, (in doing so,) generally use that of Enroughty—which name indeed a majority of them affix to legal instruments

We venture the highly probable conjecture that the individual above was the progenitor of this humble, honest and simple family. His neighbors and succeeding generations, with a wayward ruthlessness which is constantly repeating itself in matters of popular designation, adopting the cognismen which least taxed their linguistic skill.

NOTE 13. Isaac Winston.—The Winstons of Virginia are said to be descended from the ancient and honorable family of that name in England. Four of the name emigrated from Yorkshire, England, sometime previous to the year 1710. Three brothers—Isaac, of the text, William, Essex, and James; and a cousin, Pleasant Winston. They were of the Society of

1. Isaac,[1] resided first in Henrico and afterwards in Hanover County, Va. He married Sarah ———.

They had issue:

was the grand-mother of Mrs. Dolly (Payne,) wife of President Madison.

IV. Martha, b. June 3d, 1759, m Charles Woodson, of Buckingham Co.

6 Anthony[3] (Anthony,[2] Isaac,[1]) removed to Buckingham County, near the "New Store," in 1771; m. Mch. 11th, 1776, Kezia, (b. Feb. 1760,) daughter of John and Elizabeth (Walker) Jones, from Wales. Anthony Winston was a Member both of the House of Burgesses and the patriot Virginia Convention of 1775, from the County of Buckingham. He was also a Captain in the Army of the Revolution, and a gallant officer. He was the ~~owner of~~ purchaser of Peter Francisco, famous for his feats of valor and strength, whom he released from slavery to allow to enlist in the patriotic army. He was sheriff of Buckingham County for a long series of years. He removed to Davidson, Co., Tenn., in the autumn of 1801.

Anthony and Kezia had issue :

I. Anthony, b. Dec. 5th, 1782.

II. John Jones, b. May 31st, 1785.

III. Edmund, b. May, 2d, 1787, died in childhood.

X. Edmund, (second of the name,) b. June 15th, 1801, d. since the late war.

XI. Thomas, b. May 3d, 1804, settled in Davidson Co., Tenn.

In 1811 or '12, all of the children of Anthony and Kezia Winston, excepting the two youngest (who remained with their parents in Tennessee,) removed to that locality of Mississippi Territory, which now constitutes Madison County, Alabama.

"In 1813, when the war with the Creek nation commenced, a family council was held in Madison County, to determine which one of the seven brothers, and brothers-in-law should be selected to remain and protect all the families," whilst the other six "went to the war." "Wm. Winston was selected on account of his firmness and prudence to protect the young families." The wives as well as their husbands were in the Council. "John Jones Winston was a Captain, and his eldest brother, Anthony, a Lieutenant in his company—the other five served in the ranks." General Jackson "was the personal friend of all these young men," and bore cheerful testimony to the gallantry of each.

10. John Anthony Winston,[5] son of (William,[4] Anthony,[3] Anthony,[2] Isaac,[1]) d. Dec. 22d, 1871. He represented Sumpter Co., Ala., for many years in the General Assembly as Representative or Senator. He was Colonel of the ——— Ala. Regt., Volunteer Infantry, during the Mexican war; for two terms Governor of Alabama; President of the State Senate; Colonel Eighth Alabama Infantry, during the late war, participating in the battles fought on Virginia soil. He was elected United States Senator in 1866, but was not allowed to take his seat. He is described as having possessed an "unbending will" and a vigorous intellect. His style of speech was "bold and incisive." He was never called an orator, but as a debater, he had few, if any, equals in the State. His personal courage was undoubted. He was as he represented his family as being: "very tolerant in matters of religious faith."

11. John Jones Pettus,[5] son of (John and Alice Taylor,[4] Pettus, Anthony Winston,[3] Anthony,[2] Isaac,[1] was educated for the bar, but preferred planting. He was for many years before the late war a Member of the Mississippi Legislature in both of its branches. He was twice Governor of that State.

Edmund Winston Pettus, brother of the preceding, was Solicitor for the State of Alabama for eight years; Judge of the Circuit Court of the State; Major and Lieutenant Colonel 20th Regiment Alabama Infantry, and Brigadier-General Confederate States Army during the late war. He was a gallant and efficient officer, and received the encomiums of his superior officers. He is now a distinguished practitioner of law in Selma, Ala. [1874]

2. William Winston,[2] son of (Isaac,[1]) was called Langaloo William. "He was a great hunter; had a quarter in Bedford or Albemarle County; spent half the year there hunting deer. He was fond of the Indians, and dressed like them, and was a favorite with them. An amour with the daughter of an Indian Chief, who was engaged to another Chief, involved him in difficulties with the savages. They besieged him in a log fort for a week. He defended himself with the aid of three negroes with rifles. Tom, one of the negroes, stood guard every night; at length the favorite squaw went out and made peace between the belligerents. Langaloo William was a great Indian fighter."* He was endowed with those impassioned powers of natural and all-prevailing oratory, which rendered his nephew, Patrick Henry, the patriot immortal. Wirt, in his life of the latter, quotes the following anecdote from a correspondent—Wm. Pope—"I have often heard my father, who was intimately acquainted with this William Winston, say, that he was the greatest orator he ever heard—Patrick Henry excepted. That during the last French and Indian war, and soon after Braddock's defeat, when the militia were marched to the frontiers of Virginia against the Indians, this William Winston was a Lieutenant of a company. That the men who were indifferently clothed, without tents, and exposed to the rigor and inclemency of the weather, discovered great aversion to the service, and were anxious and were clamorous to return to their families; when William Winston mounting a stump (the common rostrum of the field orator of Virginia,) and addressed them with keenness of invective, and declaimed with such force of eloquence on liberty and patriotism, that when he concluded, the general cry was-'Let us march on; lead us against the enemy!' and they were now willing, nay anxious, to encounter all those difficulties and dangers which but a few minutes before had almost produced a mutiny"

4. Mary[2] (Isaac[1]) m. Major John Coles, a native of Ireland. He was an early settler of Richmond, where he was engaged in merchandizing. A small frame building recently demolished. (1871) situated on Twenty-second, between Broad and Marshall streets, was pointed out as having been his residence. Many of the timbers, though more than a century old, were in a perfect state of preservation. Major John Coles was buried beneath the old Church at Richmond, the floors of which being removed in 1857, to replace the joists which were in a decayed condition, a metallic plate, bearing his name, was found. It was, however, so much corroded that it fell to pieces.

John and Mary Coles had issue: Four sons and five daughters, of whom—

I. Walter m. Lightfoot, of Sandy Point. Issue: Mildred m. Judge Paul Carrington, the younger.
II. John settled in Albemarle, m. Rebecca, daughter of Henry Tucker. Issue:

V. Jacob.

VI. Catharine m. Baldwin, son of Philip Payne.

VII. Mary m. James M. Whittle.

The late George Winston, of Richmond, is supposed to have been a descendant of Pleasant Winston, one of the original emigrants—the connecting links cannot, however, be stated by his family.

His children were:

I. James.

II. Pleasant, now residing in Missouri. (He makes claim to a portion of the Chimborazo property of Richmond, which was the site of a Confederate Hospital during the late war.)

III. Virginia J. m. W. F. Butler; d. Nov. 22d, 1872, in her 57th year.

The descendants of James Winston[1] in Hanover, Caroline, Louisa, and Goochland Counties, have long filled offices of local trust, clerks, sheriffs, &c. Mr. Winston was Lieutenant and Adjutant of Lee's Legion of Cavalry during the Revolution.

The names of John and Benjamin Winston are among the list of officers pensioned by the State of Virginia for service during the Revolution:

"Joseph Winston, born in Virginia, 1746; d. near Germantown, N. C. 1814. He joined a company of rangers in 1760; was twice wounded in an Indian fight on the Greenbrier; was pensioned by the Legislature for his gallantry; removed to Stokes County, N. C., 1766; was its representative 1775–6, and was appointed a Major; was in several fights victorious, and for his bravery at King's Mountain, where he commanded the right wing, had a sword voted him by the Legislature. Commissioner to Cherokee Indians, with whom a treaty was made in 1777; first Senator from Stokes' County, in 1791; and Member of Legislature repeatedly until 1812; M. C. 1793–5 and 1803–7. His son, General Joseph, d. in Platte County, Mo., Mch. 24th, 1810, aged 52. He filled an important position in Stokes County, N. C.; served in the war 1812; was for many years in the State Legislature, and was a Major-General of Militia."—Drake's Dic. Am. Biog.

We take this occasion to express our indebtedness for valuable information embodied in the preceding note, which was rendered us with a prompt heartiness, by the late Hon. John Anthony Winston, of Mobile, and General Edmund Winston Pettus, of Selma, Ala.; whose action is the more highly appreciated, because they were the sole representatives of the Winston Family, from whom we received any manner of assistance—the remainder of our many applications having been entirely neglected, or met with unpardonable rudeness.

Our office may have been an unimportant one; it has surely been as thankless as it has been gratuitous.

NOTE 14. The Reverend Wm. Stith was the son of William Stith and Mary, the daughter of William Randolph, of Turkey Island.

The issue of William and Mary Stith, was:

I. William, b 1789; m. Judith, daughter of Thomas Randolph, of Tuckahoe; d. 1755. Issue: Mary, died unmarried.

II. John, of Charles City County, Va.

III Mary m. Commissary William Dawson, of William and Mary College, Va.

Issue:

A son who m. Johnson, of North Carolina, whose son, William Johnson Dawson, was a Member of Congress 1793–5, from N. C.*

"On the death of her husband, Mr. Stith, at the instance of her brother, Sir John Randolph, removed to Williamsburg, and placed her son (William) in the grammar-school attached to the College of William and Mary, where he pursued his academic studies, and graduated. His theological studies were completed in England, where he was ordained a Minister of the Episcopal Church. On his return to Virginia, in the year 1731, he was elected Master of the Grammar-school in the College, and Chaplain to the House of Burgesses."† On the 16th of July, 1736, he was installed as Rector of Henrico Parish. At the Glebe House, of which at Varina, he wrote his history of Virginia. In August, 1752, he was elected President of William and Mary College, to which he removed, and over which he presided until his death in 1755.

NOTE 18. Richard Randolph, Jr., Member of the House of Burgesses, 1769: son of the first Richard, of Curles, married Ann, daughter of David Meade, of Nansemond County. They had issue:

I. Richard married Maria Beverly, of Blandford.

II. David Meade, b. 1769, d. September 22d, 1830; Col. of cavalry in the Revolution; m. Mary Randolph, of Tuckahoe. He was appointed Marshal of Virginia by Washington, which office he held until the Presidency of Mr. Jefferson when, being a Federal in politics, he was displaced. The Colonel and his lady were a jovial couple, and dispensed a generous and hearty hospitality. Their residence at Richmond was the commodious one now known as Allan's, (the present owner being the widow of the late John Allan, Esq., commonly termed "Jock," the patron of Edgar Allan Poe,) situated at the corner of Fifth and Main streets—the grounds of which extended to Sixth street. A frequent guest, Mr. Edmund W. Rootes, a prominent marchant of that day, of skillful rhyming capacity, of a highly facetious order, dubbed the Randolph mansion Moldavia, thus ingeniously uniting the christian names of host and hostess.* "A letter from Hickory Cornhill, Esq., to his friends in the Country," humorously and graphically depicting in rhyme, the follies and vices of fashionable society of the beginning of the present century, when card playing, to which both sexes were addicted, was a feature of every social gathering, and the costumes were as ludicrous as they were indecent, is attributed to Mr. Rootes; claim, however, has also been laid for it, for both the accomplished William Wirt, and the learned St George Tucker, the elder. We cannot decide the question upon the intrinsic or internal character of the composition, and we are much too youthful to be able to more than transmit further the several traditions.

It was republished in the Southern Literary Messenger, May, 1838. It appears also in Mr. Mordicae's entertaining little book, "Richmond in By-Gone Days," Second Edition. He ascribes the lines to George Tucker.

VIII. Lucy m. Lewis Burwell, of King's Mill. No issue.

NOTE 20. Samuel Du Val was a Member of the House of Burgesses in 1773; of the Virginia Convention of 1775, and an officer of the Revolution.

NOTE 21. Rev. Miles Selden was the son of Joseph, first settler of the name in Virginia He was Chaplain of the Virginia Convention of 1775. A son, Miles Selden, Jr., represented the County of Henrico, in the Virginia Assembly for several years.

NOTE 22. Thomas Adams was one of the Delegates from Virginia to the Convention held in Philadelphia in 1778, and a signer of the articles of Confederation between the States. He was a member of the Virginia Senate of 1786, from Augusta County. He was a brother of Colonel Richard Adams, the elder.

NOTE 23. Ryland Randolph, son of Richard Randolph, of Curles. He inherited an ample fortune, which, remarks his sarcastic Kinsman, "of Roanoke," "he squandered to the last shilling."

NOTE 24. Turner Southall was a member, successively, of the both branches of the Virginia Assembly for a series of years during the Revolutionary war, and afterwards. He was a zealous patriot and a highly useful citizen, being frequently elected to local offices of trust and importance.

NOTE 25. Richard Adams.—This was Col. Richard Adams, the elder, (son of Ebenezer, of York County,) born in 1723; died August 2d, 1800; married April 10th, 1755, Elizabeth Griffin, (sister of Judge Cyrus Griffin, of Virginia, President of the old Congress of 1788,) born 1738, died Dec. 23d, 1800. Colonel Adams was a member of the House of Burgesses 1773; of the Convention of 1775, and of the Virginia Assembly frequently afterwards. He was an enterprising and public spirited citizen, inaugurating many and fostering most of the schemes of local improvement of his day. His means were ample and his landed possessions within the limits, and in the immediate vicinity of Richmond probably more extensive than any other, then resident. His residence on Richmond or Church Hill is still standing, being the large wooden building at the corner of 22d and Grace streets, so long occupied by the late Loftin N. Ellett, Esq., and now used as a convent by the Roman Catholic Church. When first occupied by Colonel Adams it was within the outer limits of a thick grove of forest trees, a representative of which, a primeval oak, of monarchial dimensions, is still standing a few hundred yards distant, near the corner of 24th and Grace streets. Both the mansion of Col. Adams and the venerable St. John's Church were used as barracks by the British soldiery, under the traitor Arnold, during his occupancy of Richmond in 1781. The efforts of Col. Adams to induce the tide of improvement in the growing little town and embryo city of Richmond in the direction of his landed possessions on Richmond Hill, were constant and strenuous. A venerable descendant, a grand-daughter—Mrs. Eliza Griffin Carrington, now in her 83d year, relates ~~to me~~ an authentic tradition of her childhood: That quite a warm friendship at one time existed between her ancestor and Thomas Jefferson, who was a frequent guest of Col. Adams. During a visit of the former, not long preceding the Resolution of the Assembly of Virginia, to remove the seat of government from Williamsburg to Richmond, Jefferson, who was cognizant then of the measure, pledged himself to Col. Adams, in case of its success, to secure the location of the public buildings on Richmond Hill. Colonel Adams, in view of the prospective ultimate advantages in the enhancement in value of his surrounding property, promising a donation of the requisite sites, for which were proposed commanding points. The Act for the removal of the seat of government was passed June 4th, 1779,* though the definite location of the building was not indicated until the May term of 1780, when it was directed to be made upon Shockoe Hill. The following were the directors therein nominated to carry into effect the provisions of the Act, viz.: "His Excellency, Thomas Jefferson, esquire, Archibald Cary, Robert Carter Nicholas, Richard Adams, Edmund Randolph, Turner Southall, Robert Goode, James Buchanan, and Samuel Du Vall "† Mr. Jefferson incurred the life long enmity of Col. Adams because of the disappointment of the latter. Colonel Adams, at a period little later, erected, in Shockoe Creek Valley, upon the site now occupied by the depot buildings of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, a substantial and spacious market house for the convenience of the residents of Richmond Hill. Three sons of Colonel Adams were also prominent and useful citizens: Colonel Richard, Jr., (born Nov. 28th, 1760, died January 9th, 1817;) Samuel Griffin, (born May 5th, 1776, died July 15th, 1821;) (both of whom served in the Virginia Assembly,) and Dr. John, (born July 14th, 1773, died June 23d, 1825,) who was, for some time, Mayor of Richmond; a daughter, Annie, (born Oct. 27th, 1762, died Oct. 27th, 1820,) married Col. Mayo Carrington, of Cumberland County. Colonel Adams and many of his decendants lie buried in the family cemetery, provided by himself, situated at the corner of 23d and Marshall streets. It occupies one-fourth of a square, and is substantially enclosed with a high brick wall. There is within our knowledge, only one other private burying-ground for the dead within the city limits, which is that of the Pickett family, immediately adjoining this, the enclosure of which has fallen to decay, and all of its tombstones have been shattered or defaced by the sacriligeous hands of wanton urchins, who, until police surveilliance was instituted, threatened to reduce the hallowed grounds of the time eloquent St. John's, to the same lamentable condition—many of its monuments presenting painful evidences of their earnest assiduity in the heartless work of mutilation and obliteration.

We are not aware that there have been any interments in the Pickett grounds for a number of years past.

Colonel Richard Adams, Jr., inherited the paternal residence; his brother Samuel erected the large mansion which formerly stood at the corner of 22d and Broad streets, and which was latterly known as Bellevue Hospital. It was destroyed by fire some years since. One of the Public School Houses now occupies its site, and Dr. John built and occupied that which is now known as the Van Lew residence, situated at the corner of 24th and Grace streets.

The decendants of Col. Richard Adams, the elder, are still represented by family names, the most prominent and of the first social position in the State.

NOTE 26. John Ragland was the son of John and Anne (Beaufort) Ragland, who emigrated from Wales to the Colony of Virginia about the year 1723, and settled in Hanover Co. Grants of land to the extent of 16,000 acres are recorded in the Land Registry Office of Virginia, in the name of John Ragland.[1]

His issue was:

I. John (of the text,) married Ann Dudley, and settled in Goochland County.

II. William[2] married and had issue.

III. Samuel[2] married and settled in Louisa County. Had issue.

IV. James[2] married Catharine Davis. Had issue.

V. Evan[2] settled in Antrim Parish, Halifax Co.; married. Had issue.

VI. Pettus.[2]

VII. Martha[2] married Thomas Tinsley.

VIII. Francis[2] married Jeremiah Pate.

Pettus Ragland[2] (John[1]) married Elizabeth Davis, of Hanover County. Daughter of John Davis of Wales.

Had issue:

I. Jean,[3] born April 12th, 1755, married Wm. Chick.

II. John,[3] born July 29th, 1756.

III. William,[3] born September 17th, 1757.

IV. Sarah,[3] born February 5th, 1759, married William Rice.

V. Elizabeth,[3] born March 24th, 1760, married B. Wright.

VI Pettus,[3] born July 8th, 1761. Moved to Halifax County.

VII. Samuel,[3] born April 12th, 1764. Died young.

VIII. Martha,[3] born Sept. 17th, 1765.

IX. Evan,[3] born Sept. 5th, 1767, married ——— Yearmans, of Louisa County. Removed to Tennessee.

X. Anne Beaufort,[3] born Oct. 7th, 1768.

XI. Nancy,[3] born July 13th, 1770, married Dr. Thomas Starke.

XII. Catharine,[3] born 1778, married John Bowe.

XIII. Fendall,[3] born 1780, died 1833, married Sarah, (died 1833) daughter of Edward and Amelia Nelson, who were cousins and decendants in the third generation of Edward, born 1690, (son of James Nelson, of Essex County, England,) who emigrated to Virginia in the year 1718, and married in 1719, Mary, the daughter of Edward and Jane Garland, of New Kent County, Va.

The issue of Fendall[3] and Sarah (Nelson) Ragland was eight sons and four daughters—of whom Elizabeth Mildred,[4] born Feb. 20th, 1814, married May 19th, 1836. Robert King, (son of John Philip and Elizabeth [King] Brock, born December 15th, 1801, died May 27th, 1850. The editor, who is of their issue, and who has much material towards a genealogical account of the Ragland, Davis, Nelson and Garland families, would most thankfully enter into correspondence with any representative of either family who may be kindly disposed to further his object. To all such, he most heartily tenders any desired information he may have in possession.

NOTE 27. John Randolph married Francis, daughter of Richard Bland.

Issue:

I. Richard married Judith Randolph.

II. Theodrick Bland died young.

III. John, (of Roanoke) M. C. and Minister to Russia.
IV. Jane Randolph.

NOTE 28. Nathaniel Wilkinson, Member of the House of Delegates of Virginia, 1778–95. A prominent and most useful citizen.

NOTE 29. Thomas Watkins.—The Watkins family of Virginia is supposed to be of Welsh descent. The name of James Watkins appears among the early emigrants of 1608. He may have been the ancester of the family in Virginia. The first of the name of whom anything definite is known, was Thomas Watkins, of Swift Creek, Cumberland County, whose will bears date 1760. He had eight children. His eldest son, Thomas, of Chickahominy, (of the text) is thus spoken of by the late Benjamin Watkins Leigh, his great nephew: "Of Thomas Watkins, of Chickahominy, I have heard very full accounts from my mother, (his father was the Rev. William Leigh, of Chesterfield County,) and from my uncle Thomas, both of whom knew him well. He was a man of the highest respectability, in every point of view, and in particular, a man of indefatigable industry." He reared a large family of children, four sons and seven daughters, from whom have proceeded many descendants of various family names, in Virginia and the Southern States.

His brother, Benjamin Watkins, married Miss Cary, of Warwick. He was the first clerk of Chesterfield County, which office he held until his death. He was a man of capacity and a sterling patriot. He was a member of the Convention of 1776, and took an active part in the affairs of the Revolution. One of his daughters married the Rev. Wm.

Leigh, the father of the chaste and elegant orator and able stateman, Benjamin Watkins Leigh, and the pure minded and learned Judge William Leigh, who so long and spotlessly wore the ermine. Another daughter, Francis, married Wm. Finnie, of Amelia County, from whom are descended the numerous families of Finnie, Royall, Worsham, Sydnor and others, in Virginia and North Carolina.

His son, Thomas Watkins, married Rebecca, the daughter of the Rev. Miles Selden; and one of their daughters was the first wife of Benjamin Watkins Leigh; another of Dr. Thomas Barksdale, of Halifax County.

NOTE 30. William Randolph.—This is presumed to be William Randolph, of Bristol, son of Isham, of Durgeness.

NOTE 31. Boar Swamp Church.—This church, so designated from the swamp near which it was built and which still retains its original name, was situated about twelve miles east of Richmond, upon the continuation of what is known as the Nine Mile Road. We have been informed that the original church was destroyed by fire, and another built upon its site by the Baptist denomination. The following extract determines the latter event:

"About 1773, he—Rev. Elijah Baker—began to stretch his lines, and to travel more extensively. Coming down into the lower end of Henrico, he, in conjunction with one or two others, planted Boar Swamp Church" *

The church has been frequently repaired, and its appearance, doubtless, somewhat altered. It has for a number of years past been known as Antioch Church.

* Semple's Hist. of Va. Baptists, p. 393.

NOTE 32. Peter Winston.—We are led to conclude this Peter Winston to have been the son of James, one of the three brothers, emigrants to Virginia.—Vide Note 13.

The issue of Peter Winston was:

I. Isaac[2] m. Elizabeth, daughter of Capt. Wm. Burton.

II. William[2] m. Martha Mosby, removed to Ky.

III. Peter[2] m. Louisa Mosby.

IV. John[2] m. Susan, daughter of Capt. John Austin, of Hanover County. Of the same family was Moses Austin, the founder of Texas, who was a merchant in Richmond in 1789. He was also engaged in the manufacture of shot, by the old method of towers, for some years. He was the contractor for covering the State Capitol with a leaden roof.

V. Susan[3] m. Anderson Grubbs.

Isaac Winston[2] (Peter.[1])

Issue:

I. Emily[3] m. Dr. Reuben Meredith.

II. Elizabeth[3] m. Colonel Charles Parke Goodall, member of House Delegates, 1816; son of Major Parke Goodall, House of Delegates, Rev. Officer, Lieutenant of the company of volunteers of 1775, organized and commanded by Patrick Henry. Major Goodall was the proprietor of the Indian Queen Tavern, of Richmond, in "olden time." A son of Charles Parke, Charles Parke, (M. D.,) Member of House Delegates, 1864.

III. Mary[3] m. Wm. Wingfield.

IV. Amanda[3] m. James Williamson.

V. Thomas[3] m. ——— Johnson.

William Winston,[2] (Peter[1].)

Issue:

I. A daughter[3] m. Dr. ——— Jones.

II. " m. ——— Sheppard.

Peter Winston,[2] (Peter[1].)

Issue:

Ann Crawley[3] m. John Jones.

John P. Winston,[2] (Peter[1].)

Issue:

I. Mary Ann[3] m. July 31st, 1817, Peter De Moville, of Charles City County; Member of House of Del. 1816–18. Issue—Felix[4] removed to Tennessee.

II. Peter[3] m. ——— Wood.

Issue:

Charles II, (A. M.,) Principal Baptist Female Institute, Richmond.

Susan Winston[2] (Peter[1]) m. Anderson Grubbs.

Issue:

Peter Winston Grubbs.

NOTE 33. Mrs. Mary Randolph, the wife of William, the first of the name who settled in Virginia. The date of her death was unknown to that indefatigable genealogist, her brilliant descendant, John Randolph, of Roanoke, and it has been obliterated by the ravages of time from her monument at Turkey Island.

APPENDIX.

A.—Bowler Cocke, p. 3, line 8. He, together with his brother, were among the patentees of the rich land of Curle's Neck, on James River, which was granted in one hundred acre lots. He was clerk of Henrico County in 1738.

B.—Four-Mile Creek, p. 5, line 13. So called from its distance from Henrico Town.

C.—James Cocke, p. 16, line 16. Clerk of Henrico County in 1699.

D.—Cornealious's, p. 22, line 38, (Cornelious's Creek.) So called from Cornelius De Hull, who owned land contiguous to it.

E.—Joseph and John Pleasants, p. 26, lines 22–3. These were the sons of John Pleasants, who emigrated to Virginia from England in the year 1665, and settled in Henrico County. The editor has in his possession a genealogical "Tree" of this family, which though unbroken as regards names, and extending almost down to the last generation, is deficient in dates. He has also manuscript material pertaining to the history of the family, who were originally, in point of religious belief, of the Society of Friends. The late Governor James Pleasants, Jr., John Hampden Pleasants, his son, the able journalist, founder and until his death in 1846 editor of the Richmond Whig, and Hugh Rose Pleasants, the brother of the latter, so well known, more recently in connection with the Richmond Press, were the descendants of Joseph Pleasants of the text. The editor desires to perfect as far as may be practicable, a genealogy of the family, and would be grateful to any of its members, who might be kindly disposed to aid him with information concerning it.

F.—Robert Pleasants, p. 70, line 2. The son of John, the younger, (vide preceding note.) He possessed a vigorous intellect, and was a man of most indomitable energy. He engaged in mercantile pursuits as well as planting, and was remarkably successful in the acquisition of wealth. He owned and resided upon the Curle's Plantation. He entered heartily into all schemes of philanthropy, and agricultural and mechanical improvements. A subject, in which he was deeply interested, was the emancipation of the African race from slavery in this country—in behalf of which he was in constant correspondence with the early advocates of the measure, both here and in England. The warmest esteem existed between him and the prominent philanthropists of Pennsylvania, Anthony Benzenet, James Pemberton, John Smith and others. Though he possessed a number of slaves, he emancipated them all by will. He conducted a correspondence with Robert Bolling, Jr., of Chellowe, Buckingham county, on the culture of the vine, the manufacture of wine in Virginia, and upon kindred subjects, in 1765–70. He died near the close of the last century.

G.—St. Peter's Church, New Kent County; vide note 11. Rev. David Mossom. It affords us deep gratification to be able to present the following extracts from a local announcement in the columns of the "Richmond Daily Dispatch," of the issue of November 14th, 1872, concerning this sacred relic of the past: "This old church has been substantially and beautifully repaired, and will be re-opened for service ———. The original designs which had been shamefully changed, have been restored. The high arched ceiling has been replaced, the walls replastered, finished with a hard coat, and pencilled to represent stone. A new gallery has been put up in the end of the church, and other modern improvements not inharmonious with its original design introduced. It is now one of the most beautiful, comfortable and effective of the country churches."

H.—Jonathan Boucher, page XI, second foot line. John Mercer, the editor of an abridgement of the Laws of Virginia, printed by William Parks, at Williamsburg, in 1737, in a diary kept by him in Spotsylvania county, in 1766, mentions a "Parson Bouchier." Could this be adopted as the correct rendering of the name, the variable orthography of the text might readily be accounted for as apparent attempts at adaptation to its pronunciation.

I.—Page XXII, foot note. New Church. Since the committal of the foregoing pages to the printer, the editor has been informed that the entire walls of the New Church were erected prior to the abandonment of the work.

J.—Joseph Mayo, note 5, page 163. A recent visit of the editor to the old burying ground of the Mayo family at Powhatan,* enables him to present what he hopes will not be considered an uninteresting addition to this note.

The Cemetery is in area about fifty by one hundred feet, and is well enclosed by a brick wall—several cedar trees within the inclosure, measuring nearly two feet in diameter, are evidently of indigenous growth. The Cemetery is distant from the mansion some two hundred yards, following the current of the river, (between the two, lie the recently erected depot buildings of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad.) It occupies the summit of an eminence rivalling that on which is built the mansion. Its military advantages caused its selection during our late unhappy strife as the site of fortifications, which remain a little to the left of the Cemetery, almost as well-defined as when they were manned by the heroes of the "lost cause."

* Now owned by Mr. Geo. S. Prince.

The Cemetery (in which there is doubtless a number of unmarked graves) contains more than a score of monuments to the dead, bearing the family names of Mayo, Poythress, Macon, Scott, Cabell, Fulton, Thom and Atkinson—among the more interesting of them are the following:

[Mayo Arms.]

Here lyeth interred the Body
Of Joseph Mayo,* Gent.,
Born in Sumersetshire,

24th, 1731, and died Sept. 5th, 1732;
STEPH., the 2d, born Sept. 18th, 1735,
and died Oct'r, 1736.

[MAYO ARMS.]

Here lyeth Interred the Body
Of GEORGE MAYO, Eldest son of Joseph Mayo, was born
In the Island of Barbadoes,
August 30th, 1717, Died Feb. ye 19th, 1739.

The two preceding are companion stones, lying side by side, prone upon the earth. They are, in dimensions, six feet six inches in length, by three feet three inches in width, and are fully five inches in thickness, the edges being rounded into the ogee form. The material is apparently a kind of marble of great hardness and density; in color, a slatish gray. The perfect preservation of the inscriptions in all of their minutiæ and the still unmarred and polished surface of the stones, are evidences of their unusual durability. The carved inscriptions were palpably by a skilled hand. The family coat of arms being most artistically executed. The Mayo coat of arms is as follows: Azure, vair gules argent, between three coronets or. Crest, a unicorn's head erased, bearing a chevron vair gules and argent. Here the arms appear with a crescent for difference, and are rendered with an Esquire's helmet surmounting the shield, and an exquisite mantling of scroll work.

The two following are head-stones of gray sandstone.

S. Green be the turf above thee,
Mother of our other days;
None knew thee, but to love thee,
None named thee, but to praise.

E. Nat. 14th of February,
Anno Domini 1761.

We will conclude with the following inscription to the memory of two children of the late General Winfield Scott, who married a daughter of Col. John and Abigail Mayo, whose epitaphs precede this. The tomb is altar-shaped, with white marble slab and panelled slate sides, which, from the mouldering of the cement, are now falling away:

In Memory of
Two lovely children,
JOHN MAYO SCOTT,
Born April 18th, 1819, Died Sept. 23rd, 1820,
Buried at Montpelier,
the seat of
Ex-President Madison;
And
EDWARD WINFIELD SCOTT,
Born Mar. 23rd, 1823, died May 17th, 1827, who lies
Beneath this tomb,
Sons of
Winfield and Maria Mayo Scott.
My soul melteth away
for very heaviness,
Comfort thou me, Oh, LORD!

K.—Note 13. Isaac Winston Though the origin of the Winston family in Virginia, is traditionally accepted by its members as rendered in the note, yet the following early mention of the name, which has come to the knowledge of the editor since the latter was penned, he deems it proper to offer here: He finds upon record in the Virginia Land Registry Office, grants of land to William Winston, the first, of date October 21st, 1687, and the last, 1706, numbering nearly 7,000 acres, and a grant of 1,079 acres in New Kent county, to Anthony Winston, dated October 24th, 1701.

Page 171, lines 11 and 12. The editor is now conclusively satisfied that Isaac Winston[1] had only two daughters, Mary and Sarah, the former of whom was grand-mother of Mrs. Madison. He extracts the following from "The Paine Family Register," No. 1, Albany, N. Y., January 1st, 1857, edited by Henry D. Paine, M. D.:

"JOHN PAYNE was an English gentleman of affluence and education. He settled in Goochland county on James river, Va. He married Anna Fleming, grand-daughter of Sir Thomas Fleming, second son of the Earl of Wigdon, who came to this country in 1616, and settled in New Kent county, Va., where he lived and died.

JOHN PAYNE,* his son, married Mary Coles, of Hanover county, Va.

His children were: William, Temple, Dolly, Lucy, Anna, Mary, John and Isaac.

WILLIAM died unmarried.

DOLLY married JAMES Madison, 4th President of the United States.

LUCY married 1st, G. Washington; 2d, Hon. T. Todd, one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the United States.

ANNA† married Hon. Richard Cutts, M. C. from Maine.

MARY married Hon. J. J. Jackson, M. C. from Virginia.

JOHN married Miss Wilcox, of Canada.

ISAAC died unmarried.

L.—Page 186, line 9. Another private Cemetery has since come to the knowledge of the editor. It is located on the north side of Lester street, between Nicholson and Louisiana

* John Payne was of the religious tenets of the Society of Friends, and acted for a number of years as Clerk at their "Yearly Meetings" held in Hanover county. His penmanship, specimens of which are in the possession of the editor, was of great beauty, regularity and minuteness. It would thus appear that the marked and graceful caligraphy of Mrs. Madison was hereditary.

streets. It contains several monuments of white marble, one of which, erected to the memory of John Prosser, who died Oct. 25th, 1810, in his 38th year, is quite handsome. It is a plinth, some four feet in height. surmounted by an urn. The only remaining name appearing, is that of Wright, and the latest inscription bears date, 1821.

ERRATA, &c.

The formidable list of errata presented, should, in itself, be amply mortifying to the editor, but he has additionally to deplore numerous other instances occasioned by the random use of the type, which, in the inexperience of the printers, it seemed impossible for him to prevent or rectify. It was a sufficient task for him to attempt the correction of such errors as palpably affected the meaning of the text:

Title page. For "Corresponding Member of the Numismatic and Antiquarian Society of Penn.," read "Philadelphia."
Page IX, line 22. For "definitly" read "definitely."
Page XI, line 3. For "Geo. Gooch," read "Gov. Gooch."
Page XII, line 1 of second foot note. For "North and South," read "East and West."
Page XIV, line 15. For "professing," read "proposing"—Foot note. For "repairrs," read "repairs."
Page 8, line 20. For "Et." read "C."
Page 10, line 23. For "Elerk" read "Clerk"—line 35. For "Hutchias Barton," read "Hutchkins Burton."
Page 20, line 20. For "Asiembly," read "Assembly;" line 29. For Hocketts," read "Rocketts."
Page 29, line 30. For "Charlet," read "Charles;" line 31. For "Morrin," read "Marrin."
Page 30, line 6. Though the name "Boo" is here rendered as in the original, it is evidently a misspelling of "Bowe;" line 12. For "Bohannah," read "Bohannan."
Page 33, line 5. For "nare" rendered as in the original, read "never;" line 19. "Passons" as in the original, read "Parsons."
Page 44, line 32. The word "Recockals" rendered as in the original, "unintelligible."
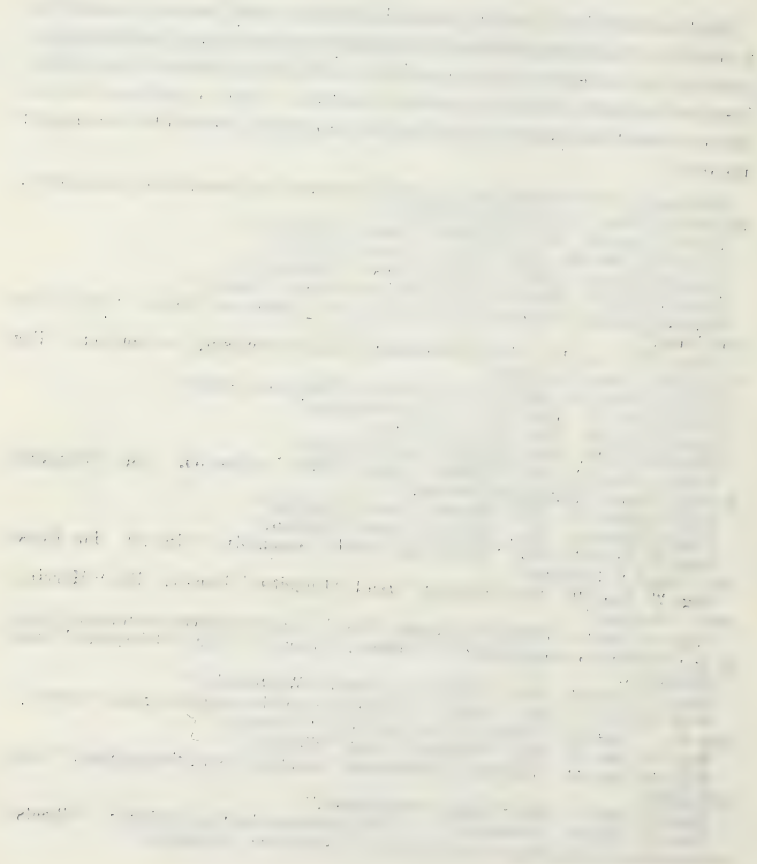
Page 53, line 10. Between & —— Omissions as in the original: "Sheels" rendered as in the original, but palpably it should be "Shields."



ERRATA, &C.

Page 57, line 21. For 1839, read 1740.

Page 58, line 1 and 2. The proper names "Bollew" and "Ballew" are evidently variations from the correct "Ballou"—which orthography still obtains in this section.

Page 82, line 32. The numerals 174 8—9 should be rendered 1748-9.

Page 124, line 37. For "futre," read "future."

Page 133, line 33. Rendered as in the original—but it is evident that the word "paupers" was there omitted after "conveying" 7.

Page 151, line 9. For "furrher," read "further."

Page 160. In the second foot reference for "Paper," read "Papers;" in the third, for 1765, read 1785.

Page 165, line 18. For "geneology," read "genealogy;" and in foot reference—for "Arachologia American Trans. and Coll. Am. Art. Soc., &c.," read "Archeologia, Americana, Coll. Am. Ant. Soc., &c."

Page 169, foot reference 2 and 3. For "Steevens'," read Perry's."

Page 171. Omit lines 11 and 12. Commence line 24 with numeral 6 instead of 4, and in line 31, for "owner," read "purchaser."

Page 173, line 19. For "family as being: "tblerant," read "family immediate as being: very tolerant"—

Page 174, line 15. Insert a comma after "patriot"—line 23, for "Tthat," read "That."

Page 175, line 1. For "Francis," read "Frances."

Page 176, line 2. For "M. O.," read "M. O. C.

Page 184, line 15. For "representation," read "representative;" line 26. After relates, omit "to me."

Page 187, line 22. Add to this sentence—"Daughter of John Davis of Wales;" line 29, for "marriad," read "married."
